Clothing is a reminder of sin, for in their innocence our first parents had no sense of shame because they had no sense of sin. Considering the Buddhist concept of sarrisara too pessimistic, he constructed in his exegesis of the mythological underworld descriptions a positive counter-image even if it is not easy for De León to follow his conclusions. The attitude to time, however, is different.

The syntactic forms used by NAS speakers in impositive speech acts set this dialect apart from other varieties of Spanish. This phenomenon is of interest not only from the purely linguistic point of view but also because the linguistic behavior exhibited in De León impositive speech acts in the northern Andean variety of De León Spanish provides insights into social values and power relationships among speakers in this area. They began to create their own cultural expressions.
